Grafton wedding ends long struggle between two continents

After nearly three years of struggle to overcome seemingly insurmountable obstacles, Hans Janke, a naturalized citizen who emigrated from Yugoslavia eight years ago, claimed as his bride Charlotte Muehlefeldt, recently arrived from Germany.

The biggest obstacle in the way of Janke's marriage had been Charlotte's admittance to the United States. Because she is afflicted with epilepsy she was barred - until the efforts of Senator Wiley and through a special act of Congress the law was changed.

Jewelry thief has guilty conscience

In a case of criminal cold feet, two gold necklaces stolen from a home were returned two days later.

The owner of the home found an envelope left on her doorstep which contained the necklaces, valued at $700. At the time of the theft there were workers in the home doing some repairs, a matter that is still being investigated.

- 8. During the summer ...
I garden.
- 9. The strangest thing that ever happened while working was ...
Getting a call asking me to do these 20 questions.
- 10. Paper or plastic and why?
Plastic. Our dog Skye leaves packages around the neighborhood and my neighbors don't appreciate them so I found that plastic bags are the best way to bring them home.
- 11. I recommend volunteering because ...
I always get more out of volunteering than the recipient, I feel like I should be the one to say thank you after volunteering. At the end of this life is it how many toys you collect or how many people you have touched. A collection of feel good moments makes life sweeter.

Brenda Peterson, interim executive director at the Volunteer Center of Ozaukee County, holds a donated bear, one among many to be collected at this year's Christmas Parade in Grafton.

12. If you could have attended a historical event, what would it have been?

It would not be an event so much as I would love to spend the day with Monet or Mother Theresa.

13. White, whole wheat or other and what in between?

Whole wheat, fresh mozzarella, fresh basil, and fresh garden tomatoes.

14. If I could leave everything behind I would go to (where) and do (what) ...

It has taken me so long to get where I am I don't want to go anywhere but if I had to go I would take my husband and children to paint in a villa overlooking the Greek Isles.

15. What did you want to be when you grew up?

Well when I grow up I want to be an Artist, Reiki Master, Landscape designer and work in the nonprofit area.

16. The last book I read was _____ and I (liked it/didn't like it/ didn't finish it, what did you think of it) ...

Mermaid Chair by Sue Monk Kidd I love to pick out great lines in a book. She wrote this of her main character describing herself, "Going through life without ever having amazed herself." That is so sad that you immediately feel for the character, I admire that in a writer.

Best Friends Veterinary Center is the only place in southeastern Wisconsin to offer canine rehabilitation services, which includes an underwater treadmill

By Katie Flehmer
News Graphic Correspondent

Walker is one tough, lucky canine. When he was just 8 months old, this golden retriever was seriously hurt after being accidentally run over. Walker's family was unable to afford the cost of surgeries and other needs that Walker would have required, and were going to put him down. However, he got a second chance. Golden Retriever Rescue of Wisconsin, Inc. offered to pay for his expenses, which saved him from euthanasia. After surgery and suffering through a summer of complications, Walker is now ready for canine rehabilitation services to bring him back to health.

Canine rehabilitation? It's true. This program, new to Wisconsin, has been set up at the Best Friends Veterinary Center in Grafton, and is run under the supervision of Dr. Nan Boss. However, this program would never have been started had it not been for the fact that the results of these rehabilitation services were witnessed firsthand by dog lovers Mary Kilpatrick and Barb Stollenwerk.

About one year ago, Mary's 10-year-old Border collie, Bailey, tore his ACL and needed physical therapy in order to regain full use of his leg. However, the closest clinic that offered such services was located in Grayslake, Ill. "It was the middle of winter and we went twice a week for six weeks," said Kilpatrick, "each time it was 120 miles round trip."

After Bailey's successful treatment, Kilpatrick and Stollenwerk, cousins and close friends, decided that it was important to bring canine rehabilitation services closer for dog lovers all over southeastern Wisconsin.

"We are huge animal and dog lovers and we wanted to do something to help both animals and their owners," said Stollenwerk, "We wanted to see how we could set this up. We found out that Dr. Boss, who already owned an animal hospital in Grafton, was the first veterinarian at the time that went through the training rehab program in Wisconsin."

Stollenwerk and Kilpatrick contacted Dr. Boss and discussed with her the possibility of setting up the rehabilitation service in her new clinic.

"It took about a year to do research, purchase the equipment, and to get it all set up," said Stollenwerk, "We purchased an underwater treadmill, an ultra sound machine and other miscellaneous equipment."

While working to get the program under way, Stollenwerk's dog suffered a herniated disc and was completely paralyzed in his back end. The 4-year-old dog needed physical therapy after surgery left him unable to walk.

"He underwent a lot of underwater treadmill treatment, acupuncture, and at-home exercises," said Stollenwerk, "after the physical therapy, his surgeon was extremely surprised and impressed with the recovery. He went from not being able to wag his tail to running around and playing like a normal, healthy dog."

"Canine rehabilitation is much like what people do for physical therapy," said Kilpatrick, "recovery is better, and faster because of therapy."

Both Kilpatrick and Stollenwerk agree that the program has been running pretty smoothly, however they also say that the hardest part is getting the word out about these available services and getting other vets to refer clients to Dr. Boss.

"We just want to educate people about this and let them know that they have other options," said Stollenwerk.

Dr. Boss, Stollenwerk, and Kilpatrick are optimistic about Walker's recovery. With the help of the surgery and the care of the rehabilitation services, they expect great things for him.

If you would like more information about the canine rehabilitation offered in Grafton, you can call the Best Friends Clinic at 375-0130. If you are interested in the Golden Retriever Rescue of Wisconsin, you can visit their Web site at www.grrwv.org.

Walker still has his playful spirit as he paws at a ball floating in the treadmill tank.

He's a happy go lucky pup as he walks on the treadmill, but the scars from the injury to his right rear leg are still visible.

Walker loves his time on the treadmill, with this treatment he has moved farther along in his recovery.

Dr. Nan Boss gives Walker a pat on the head after treatment.
